32. Polar Bear Plunge – This fundraiser will only work when the weather is cold, so it's not for every location, but it's sure to be a chillingly good time. A polar bear plunge means, quite simply, that people don bathing suits in biting cold weather and dive into the ocean or an iced-over lake. Sounds like fun, right? Someone thinks so, because polar bear plunges are becoming a popular way to raise money for everything. Each participant should gather sponsors. People don't mind donating money to a great cause, and when they learn that the person asking for a donation is willing to jump into freezing cold water, they will likely be inspired to dig a little deeper. For more information on this idea, go to www.fund-raising-ideas-center.com/polar-bear-plunge-charity-event.html.

For sizeable cash donations, let sponsors display company banners and provide an ad for inclusion in the event program. Sponsors can also provide the food and beverages, grills and fuel, tables and chairs, tents, etc.
36. Basketball Tournament – A three-on-three basketball tournament is a great way to raise money. A sponsoring organization provides a double elimination tournament for basketball enthusiasts. You'll need a few basketballs, tables, portable scoreboards, trophies, and a gym. You may also want to pay for referees, unless you can find some who are willing to support your cause by donating their time or if you want the games to be self-officiating. Your group can earn extra money by setting up a small concession stand and selling snacks and refreshments. Another way to earn money is to print programs with the tournament schedule, photos, player's names, etc. and sell ad space to local restaurants, and other businesses. You can also charge each team an entry fee for participating ($15 to $30 depending on the interest level).

37. Flamingo A Yard – You put 20-30 flamingos in someone's yard overnight, you then accept money from them to go and put them into someone else's yard. This can work with gnomes, school mascots, forks – just be creative!

Make sure to have adults stationed at every door as well as roamers walking around. You can make additional money by providing a concessions stand with pizza, soda, and candy each for $1 (makes it easy when it comes to change!) You can also sell glow bracelets and necklaces for $1-$2 each (check out Windy City Novelties at www.windycitynovelties.com – they have great prices).
42. Karaoke Night – Host a Karaoke Night for your next fundraiser. All you need is a karaoke machine (inexpensive models are available and you can also rent them), a hall or gymnasium to host the event, and a passionate crowd of would-be American Idols. Make it even more fun and profitable by asking the audience to donate money to hear the principal sing. The school cheerleaders as a group can draw a huge amount of money. Don't forget to inspire and reward your performers. Ask local businesses to donate prizes for best performance, funniest performance, and so on. Prizes can range from donated items to local gift certificates. Even simple printed awards for best group performance can be an inspiration.

Included in the admission price is an opportunity to "dunk an ump" (dunk tank), team photos, autographs, a scrimmage, food, and music. This event can be labor intensive, but the pay off can be huge - depending on the amount of entertainment available to the team that will participate. Invite middle and elementary schools to participate.

Category 4 – Raffles:

46. Raffles – People enjoy getting a chance to win something so here are some easy fundraisers. Brainstorm ideas of prizes to boost your fundraising efforts. Your raffle can be an inexpensive ticket for a prize drawing or a $100 ticket for a big prize such as a big screen television or a new car. Ask for donations from your community.
47. 50/50 Raffle – This fundraising raffle idea is great for events such as intermission at Bingo, sporting events, school functions, arts & craft fairs, during bowling tournaments, etc! The 50/50 raffle is a very simple fundraiser that many choose to use, as it does not require too much work. All you need are a few rolls of raffle tickets and a bin for the money (make sure you have one for the raffle stubs!)

48. Basket Raffle – This is a perfect fundraiser for the holiday season. Have members donate food items that are for a holiday dinner, into a basket (e.g. a can of corn, instant mashed potato's, gravy). Try to have a turkey donated by your local food store! Sell raffle tickets (after church, during half time of a school sporting event, etc.) for $1.00 a piece. Place flyers to advertise this fundraiser and to name the date & time the winner will be drawn. Make sure to write name & phone number on the back of each raffle ticket someone purchases so they can be contacted.
49. Art Raffle – Host an event where local artists donate a sample of their work and your group sells a select number of high-dollar raffle tickets, usually the same number as donated art fundraising items. The tickets are then drawn randomly at a gallery-style event and each ticket holder selects their artwork right off the wall. For more information on how this fundraiser will work, go to www.fundraiserhelp.com/art-raffle-fundraiser.htm.

Category 5 – Games/Contests:

50. Penny Drive – Make different boxes or coffee cans with the names of teachers on them. Each penny counts as one point, any other coin counts as negative the value. Or all coins count for the goal (easier to count). By the end of the week, the teacher with the most pennies has to dress-up in the costume of their choice, kiss a pig, etc.
51. Make A Teacher a Human Sundae – Get teachers who are willing to turn into a giant mess, collect money at lunch, after 1-2 weeks, the teacher with the most money get's turned into a giant sundae!
52. Make a Teacher Kiss a Pig or Get Duct-Taped to a Wall – Same idea as above.
53. Cow Pie Bingo – Rope off a section of grass, borrow a cow, make a grid and have people pay to buy a square. If the cow does its business, they win part of the profits!
54. Watermelon Eating Contest – A quick and easy fundraiser that doesn't require a lot of prep time. There is an investment required however: You will need to purchase enough watermelon to satisfy all of the contestants so ask a local grocery store if they want to sponsor the event by donating the watermelons or by providing them at a discount. Each participant and/or spectator will be asked to pay an entry fee. Keep in mind that this isn't the type of fundraiser that is going to raise thousands of dollars, but it is a good option to raise a few hundred dollars quickly. Once all participants have paid their fee, have them sit at a table with a plate of watermelon in front of them. Have people standing by ready to refill the plates as needed. Have a set time (3-5 minutes is a good estimate) in which the participants will eat as much watermelon as possible. You will need several judges observing in order to be sure that each participant is eating all of watermelon from their plates and not disposing of it some other way. Once the time is up, you will be ready to declare your winner. To make declaring a winner easier, it's a good idea to have a set amount of watermelon on each plate. For example, each plate may hold 10 ounces, or any measurement that suits you. That way, the judges will know that the contestant ate, for example, five plates and that five plates equal xx amount of watermelon.
55. Guessing Game Jar – Let your imagination run wild with this great fundraising idea. This can be done at work or at school and perfect for around the holidays. For instance, in February place a jar filled with candy hearts! People pay a pre-determined amount to guess how many are in the jar! Keep the jar out for 1-2 weeks (you do not want to keep it out too long as people may get bored!), the person who is the closest, gets to take home whatever is in the jar!
56. Sheriff's Posse or Jail And Bail Out – You pay at a game, a carnival, a school event to have people "put in jail" - then they have to pay to get out! Have teachers dressed as Sherriff's.
57. Wall of Shame – Pay to put up embarrassing, appropriate pictures at school, then the person has to pay to get it taken down.
58. Photo Scavenger Hunt – Teams of 4 are needed, they pay an entry price and then use clues or a list to have a scavenger hunt all over your community. They must take a photo of their findings. The first three teams to complete win a prize.

59. Penny War – This is for a high school or middle school. The students set up 5-gallon water jugs in a specific location. Each is labeled with a grade level. The students have a war to see who can raise the most money for charity. The key to this is that pennies and green money (dollars) are counted as positive, while silver change is counted as negative. So the grades have a war by putting pennies and dollars in their own jug and silver change in their opponents jugs.
60. Save It or Shave It – Students ask teachers to volunteer to shave their head's and then raise money to either "save it or shave it", depending on which can has more money directs the teacher on what to do. Money is accepted at the assembly, which can help lean towards saving it or shaving it.

Parents would send someone in the School a message and they would get it in their classroom as a surprise. Friends of any child in the school can also send to another child in the school.
64. Birthday Wishes – Select one day each month (like the first Friday of the month) and set up an area where students can purchase "Birthday Wishes" (a note and a piece of candy) to have sent to a student who will have a birthday sometime during that month. Deliver all birthday wishes the next . . . once students start to catch on, this can be a great monthly fundraiser!
65. Crush Soda – In the month of February have students pay $1 to send another student a can of Crush soda. They can also pay $1 to have insurance so they cannot find out who sent it to them. The person receiving the soda can pay a $1 to find out who sent it to them, but if it was insured they can't find out, and don't get their dollar back. Call around for the Soda, it can be hard to find!
